This week's obsession SKIN FIT

Now that summer is approaching, it's time to make sure your skin is protected from sun damage and those dreaded pigmentation marks. SkinCeuticals vitamin C serums, which help boost the skin's own natural protection, are my weapons of choice.

QUICK FIX

I am obsessed with the Tile tracking device. Use it to track your child, dog, house keys or even your boyfriend. Hilarious. You simply attach the Tile to a keyring (or to a person), then download the app to find out where they are. I popped one on my daughter at Universal Studios, where children can get lost in a heartbeat. It costs $25 (£16) plus $21 shipping from the US.

SAVE v SPLURGE

There's no better fashion investment than a resort dress from Australian label Zimmermann. They are so wearable and translate perfectly from day to night, and can be worn with flats or heels. Light and easy to pack, they are also one of the few styles that can take you from city to beach. I couldn't resist this dress and I'm hoping for a London store soon.

OF THE WEEK

"Styling a HELLO! fashion story is always fun, but this shoot on Camber Sands with model Jade Parfitt (opposite) was extra special. Jade was so professional despite a sand storm blowing in her eyes all day. With Elisabeth Hoff behind the lens, we were giggling non stop."

FASHION QUEST

As a jewellery designer – and obsessive – I've always got my eye out for one-of-a-kind pieces with a vintage element and Nourbel & Le Cavalier collections more than qualify. These exquisite limited-edition earrings from the designer's Nada Roma's Micromosaics line are top of my wish list.

DONNA DIALS... EMILIO DE LA MORENA

This week I got in touch with one of my favourite fashion names – Spanish-born, London-based designer Emilio de la Morena – to find out what he thinks we should all be splashing out on for the summer party season...

"This season is all about glamour for me. Mixing sequins with techno metallic fabrics and super-sexy silhouettes. Dressing up to party and dancing the night away."
